Doyle residents fight fire and malfunctioning alarm

by Tina Kunkler

A fire in the East Wing trash chute of Doyle Hall early Saturday morning left a cloud of smoke and residents speculating on its cause.

Sophomore Kevin Wing, who lives on Three-East, was preparing to dump his trash at about 12:30 a.m. when he discovered smoke in the closet where the chute is located. After alerting Phil Bernard, resident director, Wing contacted Don Vogt, resident assistant on-call at the time.

Pete Hoover, Sam Schmutte, Wing and his brother Paul then attempted to quench the fire with an extinguisher and fire hose and pulled the fire alarms on the floor. None of the alarms sounded, according to Wing. The students then began knocking on doors to tell the residents to leave the building.

Resident assistant Denis Ratekin and freshman Troy Snyder smelled smoke from Ratekin's second floor room. When they got to the trash chute, smoke was rolling out. They also contacted Vogt and called Marian College Police Department.

Snyder pulled the fire alarm on the first floor but it did not sound. The alarms are controlled by circuit breakers, which were shut off sometime before the fire, according to Bernard. Ratekin said he located the fuse panel in the basement of Doyle and reset the breakers manually and the alarms began to sound.

Vogt arrived on third floor to continue evacuation procedures while Wing was manning the fire hose with a towel over his face to protect himself from smoke inhalation. Wing and his hall mates then left the water running and vacated the building.

Officer Mike Von Clouse arrived on the scene and turned off the hose.

Vogt estimated an evacuation time of six to seven minutes from the time he was alerted of the fire, but Wing said that he did not leave the building for 10 to 15 minutes after discovering the smoke. Wing commented on the incident, "The thing that really upset us was that we couldn't pull a fire alarm."

Vogt also expressed concern that the fire department did not respond. He noticed the security officer was communicating by walkie/talkie with the fire department.

Cheerleading season begins with new advisor, new captain

by Susan Schuppan

Jeri Sue Owens was informed last week by Shirley Friedman, the new cheerleading advisor, that she was chosen to be the new Marian College cheerleading captain.

"I was shocked, but I was hoping I would be picked because this is a lot different than high school," stated the enthusiastic new captain.

Owens cheered her freshman year at Union High School in Modoc, Indiana, until she decided to play basketball her sophomore year. Once at Marian, she played basketball her freshman year until she injured her knee.

She then began cheering again her sophomore year. Owens, a junior, likes college cheering better than high school because the cheerleaders switch cheers during the game instead of everyone on the floor cheering at once.

The whole team, consisting of Owens and four freshmen, Tammy Shaw, Kathleen Clark, Jackie Fullen and Dede Wagner, is energetic and excited about the upcoming basketball season. They are planning a couple of special events for homecoming to stir up school spirit. All of the cheers are new this year, and they plan on selling miniature pom poms the week of homecoming.

There will also be a legs contest involving the male basketball player's legs. Photographs were taken of their legs, but the rules of the contest have not been established yet.

Letters to the editor

Leaky pipes

Just what does a person have to do in order to get maintenance to fix a water leak over a weekend?

This past weekend there was a water pipe leaking in Saint Francis Hall, second floor of the women's side. The proper maintenance people were notified and some person apparently wrapped a rag around the pipe and placed a trashcan beneath it to catch the falling water. Real safety smart!

This pipe had been leaking all week, why wasn't something done during the week to fix it? Why let this problem progress into the weekend when no one works?

I guess it must stand to reason that this is the "Marian way" of doing things! Such efficiency! And students wonder why the cost of tuition is going up again! But, then, that's another story.

sponse by the fire department, MCPD Chief Bob Eliot said that the RA who reported the fire said the fire department was not needed. Eliot has issued orders to the officers and dispatchers that the fire department is to be contacted immediately if there is smoke in a building.

In speculation concerning the cause of the fire, Eliot said, "Someone probably set a pizza box on fire and dropped it down the chute." This statement is based on a charred pizza box found in the bottom of the chute.

Other possible causes include lit cigarettes, remains of which were located around the Two-East trash chute and a cherry bomb (firecracker), according to Don Fleming, Chief Financial Officer.

Fleming added that there is a sprinkler system in the trash chutes, but it requires a temperature over 150 degrees to set it off. Also, he has instructed maintenance to change the locks on the fuse box.

Miss Marian

The sign reads: "Miss Marian Contest cancelled due to lack of interest." The more appropriate ending should be due to lack of: planning organization
publicity
committee participation getting information out in a timely manner (speaking of timely, how many different dates were given?)

Basically, Miss Marian was cancelled due to the lack of an effective social planner.

Sincerely,
Miss Marian and
Mrs. Marian hopefuls

Knights fight song

The band will be playing and the choir will be singing our Marian College Fight Song at the first basketball game, which is the Homecoming game on November 18th. Here are the words to the fight song. The words can also be found in the programs at the game. Please show your Knight spirit at the game by learning the words and joining in as we support our Marian College Knights in their new 1989-1990 basketball season.

We rise and cheer for you dear Marian,
And let our voices ring on high.
We'll loudly sound you name,
And proudly spread your fame.
Raise your glory to the sky.
In battle you shall march to victory,
While we proclaim your might,
Your gold and blue will fly,
As we forever cry:

Hail to the Marian Knights.
K-N-I-G-H-T-S
Hail to the Marian Knights.

Senior profile

by Tina Kunkler

A native of Zimbabwe, Godfrey Matemachani will complete his degree in Business with a concentration in finance in December.

The 36-year-old arrived in the United States in 1986 with the intention of furthering his education, a goal he had not had the opportunity to accomplish earlier. He began studies at Marian College in January 1987.

"It's (Marian) an excellent college," said Matemachani. Zimbabwe, which borders South Africa, has a British educational system. Under this system a student is drilled only in the major area of study, whereas Marian offers a diversified curriculum.

He praised all members of the college for making his education possible, "Up to the janitors, everybody is really friendly." And later he said that Marian students and faculty have "been more than happy to help... That interaction which is there is very important."

Ken Elmendorf, associate professor of economics, has influenced Matemachani most. "He is an excellent man, a very principled person," said the economics minor.

Matemachani would have liked to have seen the Business Department expanded earlier (now being done under the direction of Dick Hoogerwerf, chairman). He has received some benefits of the new courses, but said he came a few years too early.

After graduation, he plans to begin master's degree work at Butler University in the field of finance. Upon completion of the two-year program, Matemachani will take his family home.

His wife, Susan, is a junior at Marian. The couple has three daughters: Run-gano Nancy, Rumbi Samantha, and Kudzai Jean.

In his spare time, Matemachani enjoys watching American basketball, which is more competitive than basketball in Zimbabwe, but misses watching his favorite game, soccer. He also has several friends in the United States to visit.

As parting advice to the college, Matemachani said, "I would like to see Marian College being transformed from a college to a university."

Lighter side

by Michael Rinard

Listen my children and you shall hear of the tale about the deluge of water at Frank's Place this weekend.

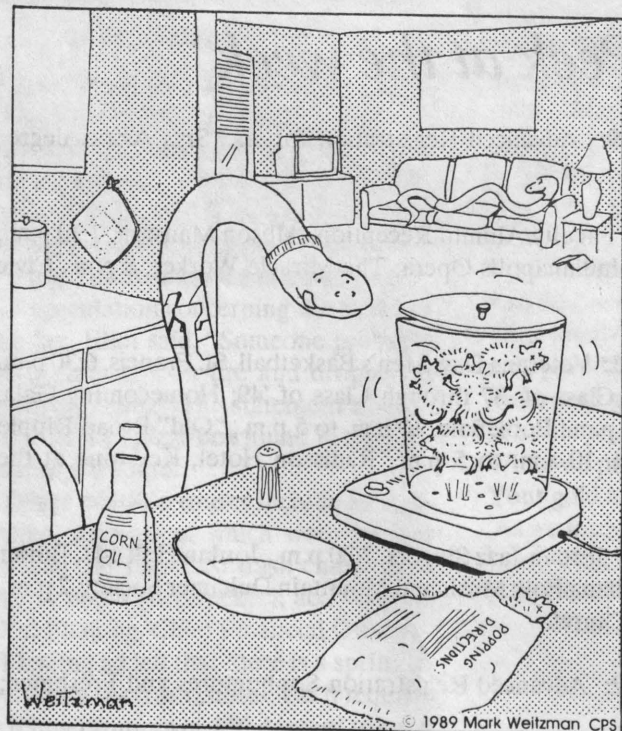

Early on Saturday morning water, both hot and cold, was dripping down from the ceiling on the women's side of the prison. The proper procedures were followed for reporting such malfunctions to the proper authorities. But, was the leak taken care of? N-o! The water leak was wrapped in a cloth and allowed to drip into a wastebasket. (Our tax dollars hard at work again!)

What did the inmates think about this water leak? Sally was dismayed to wake up and find a large puddle of water surrounding her bed. "Like I stepped out of bed into this pool of cold water. Boy! Talk about waking up fast! Like I was just glad that I could swim!"

Assistant Counselor Peter Cottonpatch said, "We tried to stay on top of the leak this week, but our maintenance crew was just spread too thin, what with vacations, sickness, and a few just not showing up. We hope to be able man-powerwise to replace the offending pipe this week."

Does anyone want to predict when the pipe will break again? (Confidentially, I understand the lottery odds are 15-1 that the pipe will leak before the end of this month.)

Editorial

The invitation reads, "The Sisters of St. Francis, The Board of Trustees, Faculty, Staff, Alumni and Students of Marian College request the honor of your presence at the Inauguration of Dr. Daniel A. Felicetti as the Sixth President of the College on Sunday, November 12, 1989, Marian Hall Auditorium 3200 Cold Spring Road Indianapolis, Indiana."

This public relations event has been the cause of much grief over the past two months. Rumors have leaked to the student body about the events that will take place and who will and will not be invited to the events. Unfortunately, nothing has been done to dispell the growing evil of gossip surrounding the weekend.

How can Marian College represent itself as a community when it cannot work together as a single unit on a project as important as this?

In search of a 21st century perspective

by Dr. Louis C. Gatto

"The first-generation is the next generation." Today's first-generation college students will be tomorrow's leaders. This theme echoed throughout an address delivered by Dr. J. Herman Blake, Vice-Chancellor of IUPUI, at the first "Realizing the Dream" banquet held in Indianapolis on October 28.

As reported in the Carbon several weeks ago, "Realizing the Dream" is a new program of the Independent Colleges and Universities of Indiana. Its purpose is to encourage the future college enrollment of those with no parental tradition of higher education by honoring and publicizing the freshman year success of current first-generation college students.

Having been the first in his family to attend college, Blake represents those targeted by the program. But more than that, he is an exemplification of the totally disadvantaged, those who believe there is no hope of their ever participating in the dream of a college education.

A member of a large family, Blake was raised in Harlem by a welfare mother. An abandoned storefront was called home. His boyhood heroes were the youthful "numbers runners," numbers being the illegal inner-city forerunner of today's legal lottery. Dropping out of high school, he drifted into the military.

And there the story might have ended. But it did not.

The service provided Blake with the first of many opportunities to advance himself, each of which he eagerly seized. He completed the G.E.D. With this credential and the financial assistance acquired by military service, he entered New York University. A 1960 Woodrow Wilson Fellowship then led to graduate studies at the University of California, Berkeley, from which he received a Ph.D. in 1973.

The one-time high school dropout progressed rapidly through the faculty ranks to the full professorship. Along the way, he was awarded additional fellowships--Rockefeller, Ford, and John Hay Whitney. Prior to his current administrative position at IUPUI, he served as the Founding Provost of Oakes College in California and the President of Tougaloo College in Mississippi.

Blake's achievements would be remarkable had he been "born to the purple" with every conceivable advantage of family, economic means, and academic preparation. That he was not demonstrates what is possible when individual determination is fused with opportunity and the commitment of colleges willing to take a chance with motivated "at-risk" students.

Yes, Dr. J. Herman Blake is an inspiration for first-generation college students and those who aspire to be. But he is more: he symbolizes an egalitarian ideal directly related to the future of the nation in the 21st century.

And this is one person's opinion.

Proposal to bar freshmen from student loans

(CPS) -- A new government audit that shows an alarming increase in the default rate for Supplemental Loans for Students (SLS) may help build political enthusiasm in Congress for a bill to bar first-year students from getting such loans, sources say.

"The report adds credence" to the bill, passed by the House but stalled in the Senate, to cut off first-year students from Supplemental Loans, said Rich Jerue, staff director of the House Postsecondary Education Subcommittee.

First-year students, Jerue said, are more likely to drop out and default on their loans.

"It's not a very sophisticated way to reduce defaults, but at least it works," said Philip Rever of the Washington, D.C.-based Higher Education Assistance Program, the nation's largest guarantor of student loans.

The measure generally is aimed at cutting off students at proprietary, for-profit trade schools.

"Students attending proprietary schools generally have higher default rates" than students at other kinds of two-year and four-year campuses, said William Gainer of the Government Accounting Office (GAO), which did the new audit.

The audit found the relatively new SLS program, enacted in 1986, had a default problem as bad as older federal student loan programs.

The GAO found SLS defaults grew from $14 million in 1987, its first year, to $247 million in 1989.

The SLS program provides market-rate loans to students who qualify for other government-guaranteed loans such as Stafford Loans.

An Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

From the beginning, the Inauguration Planning Committee decided to invite a representative number of students to the inaugural ceremony itself. No specific number was named. Over 1000 invitations were sent out to various dignitaries and people associated with Marian College. Student leaders were to receive invitations after the initial RSVP date had passed for everyone else. At that time, the number of available tickets would be known, and that number of students could be invited.

The Marian College Student Association Board was made aware that a number of students would be invited, but again no number was set. They were also asked if a special program would be appropriate during the student homecoming week that would allow the students to make contact with Felicetti. The board agreed with the proposal. Members of that board objected to the manner in which student participation was being handled, yet they did nothing to alter that situation. They also did nothing to foster the planning of a program involving the students and the president.

As the student newspaper, the Carbon did nothing to publicize the planning of the inaugural weekend or what involvement the student body would have in the events.

Once again, Marian has proven that it is not what it claims to be; a community.

The planning committee should have taken a realistic look at how many people would accept the invitations. One always plans for less than the number invited. And if they plan a large event for a small space (MHA), they should have reconsidered what was most important, formality or people. The event should have been open to the entire student body. Realistically, only a tenth, at most, would attend and sources tell me that there is more than enough room for that amount.

Inviting those students whose presence is desired less than a week before the actual ceremony shows a lack of respect for the student's limited time. Many of those invited have made prior commitments and will not be able to attend.

The committee has succeeded in alienating many students by not providing the information about what is being planned. This

Students to participate in Butler's Model UN

by Laura Horner

On November 9-11 Marian College will again participate in the Model United Nations held at Butler University.

This takes place yearly with fifteen to twenty colleges and universities participating. The three days involve United Nations council sessions, with students acting as the delegates from the countries represented on the council.

The purpose of the MUN is to improve the understanding and awareness of what the UN is all about. It is the students' responsibility to represent the country by presenting and gathering support for proposals.

Dr. William Doherty, professor of history and political science, advises the delegates. He thinks that the MUN widens the perspectives for students, "They represent countries some of them have never heard of or know nothing about."

Five students from Marian will participate: Stacey Nicholas will chair one council for the first time; Steve Swinford will defend the foreign policy of South Africa; Jodi Skelly and Laura Bauman will represent Nepal; and Sean Gallager will represent Malaysia.

Both Nicholas and Swinford won awards last year as the best delegation and Nicholas won best delegate honors.

Nicholas enjoys her involvement with the MUN, "I really like politics and international relations and I enjoy sitting around with thirty other people that have the same interests."

The students prepare for the councils by watching the news and reading newspapers. They must also become familiar with the history, vital statistics and foreign policy of their countries, which can be done by contacting their embassies in the United States.

In the spring semester Indiana University will sponsor another MUN. Any interested students should contact Doherty at ext. 270.

has caused further rumors. Contrary to these rumors, students are invited to the Catholic liturgy on Sunday and the reception at Allison Mansion following the ceremony; students are not being asked to park their cars off-campus; and the bill for the weekend has not been totalled, so a figure cannot be released as official.

Student board should have expressed their concerns more vocally. As a government, they are responsible to act as student advocates when dealing with other departments of the college. Two weeks ago the MCSA president was asked to submit a list of student leaders to the committee so that invitations could be sent to them. The list arrived Tuesday morning, November 7. The student board vice president is also a member of the planning committee.

The Carbon should have been investigating the whole process and reporting to you, the students, what was happening. In that respect, until now, I have failed. As editor, I take partial responsibility in the misinformation you have received. Please see the insert in today's paper for the events of Inaugural Weekend.

The college should take a lesson from this entire situation. We must make a commitment to building that community which we can now only hold in our imaginations.
