Vol.', No. 9

Joyous matins, to you, coffee drinkers! Take a slow gulp of that steaming brew, shed that lugubrious face, sit back, relax, and give an eer that lists well, No prolific words or dissertations shall I imbibe this morning--it's for too early for such rhetorical lucubrations, No, the newness and freshness of the larch air has placed me in a rather dormant status. It's common to have that contented feeling about this time of year, you know. You feel light as the cool morning breeze, cheerful as the newly arrived robins, and as tranquill as the greening grass. In the vernacular, you have caught that is knows as spring fever. Really! You know what spring fever is, don't you? You don't? Then allow me to further your neglected education by way of San!s Almanac of Fiction and Fact. According to Sam, sprirgg fever is that dread malady-now catch this all you Biology people--that maiady when the minerals in your body turn to lead in your pants. Now I'm not Iook. ing for an argument from those who say this is a biological impossibility. I'm just passing this along for Sam. Don't see me, see Sam. What this all boils down to, java sippers, is this. oh, yes, please do take onother sip, I had no intentions of keeping you from enjoying your coffee. As I was saying before you so rudely distracted me, spring fever can be an awfully enjoyable state, yet when various and sundry affairs start to pile up, noticed but unattended, the complications that evolve can surely be excruciating. Simply then, atudies ara casily left to the vayside for less demanding interests. Really, it's as facile as that. So let's be carefil as to how we enjoy the sprung springness of the atmosphere. Easter vacaction, as well as mid-terms, iingers just around that budding branch. Keep up the vork despite all the tendencies that strive and contest within you to amalgamate such an unusual chemical formation, Handles down, caffein addices, that's all fron Sam and me until next cup,

In the year 1949, the isters of St. Francis placed a statue of the Forgotten Saint in a comer of the old Science Building, overlooking the fomdations of what would one day be Marian Hall. On that occasion they prorised to bring himinside, away from the elements. on one condition-m-that he help fraisp the needed funds to complete Marian. A visit to Sister Esther's office wily help to satisfy your curiosity, On a table in the right hand corner you will see a statue of St. Joseph, the Forgotten Saint. And yet we don't quite forget him, or rather, the Church doesn't forget hirn. The month of March has beet set aside for the Father of the Holy Family and larch 19 given to him as his day.

Remember this the next time you stop in Chapel, and after paying your respects to Our Lord and lis lother, look over to your right. There you will see a man holding a saw. Have a thought for him, also. He deserves it.

A SAD STORY

They live for only a scond. Their death supplies pleasure for others. Sonetines they make people nervous wrecks, especially during Lent. And are they expensived at times they die in a colfee cup. But many are distributed disrespectivily on any floor. Their owners scatter thom anywhere, and everywhere. Bocause they livo and dic for the human race, they aro mistreated

Poor little, lonely, miscrable ashes. All they ask is to be buriod in their proper placo----Tho Ash Trayd
