FLOAT THROUGH

FINALS~WEEK~

Take the world's most private vacation, relax, organize your thoughts, and be back on campus in less than 2 hours? A tempting thought with finals week on its way. This is, however, the claim made by the Serenity Tank Center-home of the isolation tank.

Thoreau found solitude with nature. Dr. John Lilly asked of solitude another question: "What nature rests within me, already?" In 1954 he began the search to find out. Thirty years later, the tool he developed to ask this question is entering mainstream American life. Serenity Tank Center, Inc. brings to Indianapolis "Samadhi" Isolation Tanks- the design developed by Dr. Lilly and Samakhi Company founder Glenn Perry.

Constructed of space-age plastic, the tank contains ten inches of water into which are dissolved 800 lbs. of Epsom salts. In such a medium one can only float. The water temperature is 93-94 degrees F. or skin temperature. After several minutes in the tank one ceases to feel the contact of skin with water. It is the nearest sensation to weightlessness we can know of, here on earth. Finally, with the chamber door shut, comes total darkness, total silence.

Do we automatically sleep in the absence of light, sound, and touch? Much to the contrary, the mind blossoms and leaps when left to its own device. Perhaps no other form of relaxation/meditation offers as great a reward so easily. No training is required, no special knowledge is needed, no physical demands are made. Anyone can float.

Uniformly, clients experience deep physical relaxation. Tension and stress are countered effectively. Beyond this, benefits are as varied as the motives of the clients: physical therapy, emotional or intellectual encounters with isolation, deep whole-body meditative experiences. Just as there is no "correct way" to use the tank, there is no "correct reason" to use it. Yet whatever the motivation for floating, one fact remains clear from its diverse clientele (housewives, athletes, doctors, dancers, policemen, business execs, on and on)-- a sense of well being and rejuvenation result.

With three modern tanks, their floating experience is a far cry from the primitive box in the movie Altered States. Individual rooms with heat lamp, shower, an assortment of bathing necessities and toiletries offer clients floatation in utmost comfort and privacy.

Sue Wagman and Robert Sander, co-owners of the center feel that the serenity tank is "the perfect environment for relaxation and inward journeys." Located at 2070 E. 54th St., an appointment can be made by calling 251-9992. Special student rates are $12.00 an hour.

DEAR ABBY

Dear Abby:

Recently we have experienced the death of an old and new friend-- the Student Center. Was it murder or some mysterious disease? Did the installation of four air conditioners and talk of painting the old cafe cause it? Was it lack of interest?..

by students,
by student oriented
admission, administration,
by lack of funds,
by lack of interest
to raise funds???

These questions, Abby, surround the death of our friend. We are grieving and do not know what to do.

Signed,
HELP

Dear HELP:

It's too late for the doctor (except maybe Quincy). Call the mortuary and Homocide Department--maybe for some last rites. One last possibility... maybe it was rained out with the baseball season.

DATELINE CLARE HALL GYM:

Wednesday night signaled the start of the long awaited Co-ed Volleyball tournament. Action was fast and hard fought as over 190 players and 16 teams from the blue & orange leagues battled on the road to the Championship. All of the teams seemed calm, but very anxious to know when the batting cage net was going to fall and reduce the space in which they could play. Despite this hazzard and the thoughts of finals lurking around the corner, the teams persevered and when the dust cleared and the Clare gym lights died down, the following teams survived:

Thi, EKA's, Cold Ones, B.c. Raiders, Furman, Fu-Bar, Lost Cause, and Staff.

Thanks to:

Dirty Dozen, Beasties, Weasel, Rejects, Little Kings, Smash Hit, Brats, and Klapko . . .

For a Great Season!
