Local black artist challenges all to seek dreams

by N.M. Gasco
staff writer

With all the controversy concerning black issues here at Marian College, let us step back from the madness and ignore the uncalled for confusion long enough to appreciate a man who crosses the racial boundary and dissolves the division to deliver a message.

Gilbert Young was the artist at the small gallery Art Xpressions, that was the main attraction of a black arts exhibit on October 27. There, he mingled openly with the crowd, stopping to answer questions, speak to adults and give advice and encouragement to students both black and white.

Two of his works receive much recognition. They particularly stand out from his other works to convey a message through talented and creative expression. The first is a pencil drawing, simple in composition, of a man reaching down to grab someone's hand to help pull him up. It is entitled "He Ain't Heavy." The person he is pulling up remains unknown, as just his hand is visible. The second picture, entitled "We As One," shows a black man and woman pulling together on one end of an American flag, against an unknown force. The flag is the only thing in color.

When Young was asked what is on the other end of the flag, surprisingly enough his answer was not "racism," like most would imagine. It was rather, all the things that prevent one from obtaining his share of the American dream. This can be one's own lack of faith in oneself, doubt, or even fear of failure. The artist also stressed that a person should never abandon dreams, but should always keep them as goals to strive for. If one wants to write a book for example, Young's advice would simply be to do it. If a person keeps believing and striving, then the resources will somehow appear. There will always be someone to show the way or to open a seemingly locked door.

We As One

Young himself came from the ghetto, was put in a slow group of children with learning disabilities, and never attended college. But now he is a recognized and distinguished artist. He said, "If people like my works they pay me money for them; if they don't like them, then bye!" By this he means that one should not always worry about failing and trying to please everyone, because doing so only puts limitations on and crushes a person's capabilities.

Young's ideas, as well as his works, are universal. We do not have to think in terms of black and white to relate to and learn from them. This is because all of us, black and white alike, desire to perform to the best of our abilities. We all have obstacles we must overcome as we go through college and as we go through life. The important thing is that we must never lose sight of our dreams.

Co-captains lead cheerleaders and school spirit

by Kimberly Blair
staff writer

The cheerleading squad for 1990-91 has two co-captains this season, Jeri Sue Owens and Dede Wagner.

Owens is a senior Physical Education major. She has been cheering for the Knights three years. Owens has been captain two years. On having co-captains she stated, "The responsibility is not on shoulders of just one." Owens also spoke of the attendance of the Homecoming game, saying, "Saturday was a lot better than in the past."

Wagner is a sophomore Nursing major. She was in agreement with Owens about the benefits of having co-captains. Wagner stated that, "it is more organized and easier to get things accomplished." She has been cheering for the Knights two years. Wagner said the Homecoming game, "had the most crowd response."

The squad has some tentative plans -- an aerobics class for the

Madrigal Dinners: a delight to senses and season

Jenny Miller
staff writer

Madrigals are soon approaching. You certainly do not want to miss these unique festivities going on at Allison Mansion on November 30, December 1, 2, 7, and 8.

Each year the three Marian choirs come together for five nights of Christmas fun. The show begins in the foyer where the swing choir performs. After that, the crowd moves to Allison's rectangular, windowed hall where the Chamber Singers entertain as dinner is served. Finally, the guests saunter to the marble room and the Chorale is responsible for putting the final touches on the elaborate evening.

Madrigal singing is something you may have had the pleasure of studying in Humanities. Madrigals appeared in Italy during the Renaissance as classical poems were set to music. The English madrigal tradition, from which our dinner is modeled, is a bit less formal; generally, singers got together on special occasions to entertain themselves.

The chamber singers will be recreating this mood of the madrigal with both traditional madrigal pieces such as the "Boar's Head Carol" and a "Wassail." Also included in the program are an assortment of modern madrigals. Guests will be sure to laugh as the singers express the "spirit of the season" with (and they mean it literally) "Throw the Yule Log On Uncle John."

The mixture of old and new is sure to please. Tickets are available in Allison Mansion for $20 per person. This price is well worth the meal, featuring cornish hen, and the entertainment.

Fr. Bryan: teacher & chaplain

by N.M. Gasco
staff writer

Unlike most required courses, Father Frank Bryan does not receive too many complaints concerning his theology classes. In fact, Moral Issues is usually completely full by the time final registration arrives.

The reason behind this, according to him, is that theology has something to offer everyone. As we go through life, we must face and overcome obstacles in order to reach our goals and no one knows this more than Father Bryan.

Ever since high school, he desired to become a priest. Towards the end of his seminary, after attending St. Meinred in Southern Indiana, he started teaching through the Office of Catholic Education. He taught adult education, Latin, and religion for a seminary preparatory school. After the formation of the Vatican Council, which changed the Catholic viewpoint, he went back to school at the Catholic University in Washington D.C. Soon after, he requested to teach college level students, thus joining the staff of Marian College in 1974.

Since that time, he has interested and motivated many students, Christians and Atheists alike. This is because Father Bryan does not want to pressure students to, "become Catholic or get an F!" What he does rather is use the classroom as an opportunity that forces students to realize their basic needs and concerns and to ask ultimate questions concerning the purpose of life. But more importantly, he uses theology to suggest answers for life's perplexing problems.

These answers are found through support systems, in both families and friends and in a supreme being. Father Bryan realized this himself when he discovered that he had colon cancer in 1989.

He also realized that, "People take a lot for granted. Now, I really appreciate my life." Many of us do take things for granted and it is only when we undergo hardships that we truly become aware of how fortunate we are; it is through experience that we learn. Everything happens for a reason, although most of the time we are left wondering what God's purpose really is. But in such times we have to be satisfied, as Father Bryan said, with the idea that, "Someday I'll ask Him!"

"I didn't want to visit Marian College in 1987 because, well, my mother wanted me to. But after my tour I really liked it. Then I had to accept my mother saying, 'I told you that you would like it.' It's funny now," said Mikki Poynter referring to her pre-college experience.

Poynter graduated from Hamilton Heights High School in Northeast Indiana. Marian College caught her eye because of its environment. "I liked the small friendly atmosphere," said Poynter.

Being involved in Marian's clubs and activities is one of Poynter's noticeable qualities. The following are some examples of her many interests here in the past four years: member of the Booster Club for three years, Fundraising Committee one year and President two years; Orientation Staff for three years, Orientation committee two years; Convocation Committee for two years; 6-planner of Family Fall Festival 1990 (a.k.a. Family Day).

Poynter's major field of study is psychology. She was involved in the Psychology Club for four years, of which she was the President one year. For two years she was active in Psi Chi (National Honors in Psychology). Also within the Psychology Department she helped coordinate the Big/Little Psyb program. Poynter feels her top achievement will be hopefully getting her research project published.

Intramurals have also been a part of Poynter's activities. She played volleyball (women's and co-ed teams) and softball for three years. Poynter's hobbies include water skiing, swimming, and walking.

Planning to go on to graduate school, Poynter wants to study special education or elementary school counseling.

On a final note, the senior said, "I want to thank all the people at Marian for their support and guidance in the past four years."

Dear Norm

Dear Norm,

Guntentag. I'm a senior from another outstanding university, (to the north). I have this problem. I admire two women from E.L.S. How do I go about getting to know them before they go back home.

Sincerely,
BW

Dear Norm,

Why can't I get a date? I am a very fun-loving person, who loves to have a good time, but yet a little timid. I've tried every way to impress a guy, even by being myself, but nothing works. All I want to do is have fun without a serious relationship; unless brought upon by itself.

Help me,
Close to Tears

Dear BW,

If I were in your shoes the first thing I would try to do would be talk to them in class. Ask them, "Is this what the prof meant?" or a similar question to start a conversation. From that, talk to them more often, and talk about things other than class. Once you are friends you could ask them to go to a party or a movie with you. Work quickly because they might not be here for much longer. BW, remember one thing, when you are talking to them be yourself.

If you would like Norm to answer a question of yours, submit a letter in an envelope addressed to "Dear Norm." Place it in the Carbon mailbox in the faculty mail room which is located in the basement of Marian Hall. All letters are subject to the rules listed in the Carbon publication box.

Are additives really carcinogens?

Joseph R. Coelho
guest writer

Everything
Gives you cancer.
Everything,
There's no answer.
-Joe Jackson

So goes the pop song, and so goes a common lament of all diet-conscious people who worry about potentially dangerous chemicals in their food, such as pesticides and food additives. Researchers now are beginning to see an answer, and the answer is that not everything gives you cancer. Their evidence is as follows: most compounds that are "known to cause cancer in laboratory animals," such as saccharin, are fed to rodents at the maximum tolerated dose for a given length of time. At the end of the experiment, the rodents are dissected and examined for the presence of tumors. If tumors are more frequent in these animals than in a control group fed normal food, then it is concluded that the compound is carcinogenic. Scientists believed that the compound had caused damage to the DNA of the animals' cells, resulting in a mutation that caused tumor growth. Such a compound is called a mutagen. Since a mutagen can presumably cause a mutation at low doses if the exposure time is long enough, such compounds are usually banned.

Recently, it has been shown that many such compounds are not mutagens at all. At the nearly-lethal levels at which these compounds are given, many of the rodent's cells are killed. These cells are replaced by the rapid division (mitosis) of surviving cells. Dividing cells are much more at risk of mutating than quiescent cells. These mutants can become "renegade cells" that grow to form cancerous tumors, which are discovered at the end of the experiment.

But the mutation was not caused by the compound at all. In fact, there is strong evidence that the mutations are a result of chemical produced within cells themselves. Natural accumulation of DNA damage is believed to contribute to the aging process and its associated diseases, such as cancer.

About half of all synthetic chemicals tested in this way have been shown to be carcinogenic. About half of all naturally occurring chemicals tested in this way also cause cancer in rodents. Plants produce these toxic chemicals, called secondary compounds, to discourage animals from eating them. These compounds are present in our diets at much higher levels than synthetic compounds. About ninety-five percent of the dry weight of mushrooms consists of carcinogens. However, both these natural and synthetic substances are present in our diets at very low concentrations. At these low levels, the compounds do not kill cells or increase the rate of mitosis, and, therefore, do not cause cancer.

Although based on sound scientific data, some of these conclusions are relatively recent and, perhaps, controversial. It would be grossly premature to say that food additives and pesticides are harmless, but perhaps now we can worry about them a little less.

Nonalcoholic beverages produce same effect

SEATTLE, Wash. (CPS) -- University of Washington researchers say they have managed to get about 200 UW students, told they were drinking alcoholic beverages that really were nonalcoholic, to act drunk, make gross sexual advances toward each other and confess to feeling "buzzy" and "a little blasted."

"It's like 'Pavlov's dog,'" said G. Alan Marlatt of UW's Addictive Behaviors Research Center. "Just knowing you are going to have a drink, seeing it poured, touching it to your lips and feeling it go down can make the expectations come true, and set off a chemical reaction in the body."

MOVIES -- new releases

THE MAIN INSIDE (PG)

Drab drama based on the true story of daring journalist Gunther Wallraff who infiltrated a sleazy West German newspaper with right-wing leanings. There he exposed questionable political connections and various instances of corruption. Such activity should offer some excitement and intrigue. But as presented here, the thrills are drained away by a convoluted script and unimpressive character development. Jurgen Prochnow plays the determined reporter. Peter Coyote and Nathalie Baye co-star. Directed by Bobby Roth. Running Time (RT):93 mins. BORING DRAMA

THE NASTY GIRL (NO RATING)

Lena Stolze is in the title role as a plucky school girl who doggedly digs up the Nazi past of her quiet German home town. Her efforts lead to embarrassment, resentment, and threats. This account, based on a true story is billed as comedy. But the film is hard-pressed to offer many laughs because of the story's grim nature. Although the subject is compelling, the telling is often muddled. Monika Baumgartner and Michael Gahr co-star. In German with English titles. Directed by Michael Verhoeven. RT:92 mins. FAIR COMEDY

SIBLING RIVALRY (PG-13)

Kirstie Alley is ever perky and funny in this screwball comedy various TV sitcoms. But the gags often are trite and the plot is burdened with too many outlandish coincidences. Alley plays a goody-goody wife of an overbearing physician. She is goaded into having a quick affair with a stranger who winds up dead because of the sexual activity. Various complications pile up. Also with Bill Pullman and Carrie Fisher. Directed by Carl Reiner. RT: 88 mins. FAIR COMEDY

STEPHEN KING'S GRAVEYARD SHIFT (R)

Hordes of rats and a creepy monster in the basement provide the gruesome elements in the screamer from the King of horror movies. The action evolves in a dilapidated textile factory where the late-night cleaning crew encounters terror and death. This low-cost film is populated with a spirited cast of mostly unknowns who work with only a mildly suspenseful script which lacks sufficient diabolical appeal. With David Andrews, Kelly Wolf, and Jonathon Emerson. Directed by Ralph Singleton. RT:86 mins. FAIR HORROR

MSU Pucker Breaker '90
becomes Record Breaker

(CPS) -- It is almost official: Mankato State University students have laid claim to the world record for having the most couples kissing at one time, apparently stealing the title from Syracuse University at an October 24 Kiss Off! MSU Pucker Breaker '90.

Five-hundred sixty-six participants gathered on the university's rugby field for a mass pucker up.

To win official recognition from the Guinness Book of World Records, couples had to kiss on the lips, and stay lip locked for 10 seconds. Sponsored by Mankato's student paper, The Reporter, contestants easily outdid Syracuse's relatively chaste mark of 400 kissers set last summer.

Television camera crews and Pucker Breaker officials roamed through the crowd, making sure 288 couples' lips, some meeting for the first time, stayed pressed together for the requisite 10 seconds.

But the event was not without controversy. Women's rugby club members protested the event because it took place on the rugby field, and some claimed vehicles left "ankle-deep" impressions on the field.

Nevertheless, Pucker Breaker organizers say they will still compile all their registration documentation, have it verified by local officials, and they will send it to the Guinness Book of Records, where the facts and figures will be double-checked.
