CARTER PRESS CONFERENCE———In a press conference yesterday, President Carter touched on the issues of Iran, the economy, and discussed different aspects pertaining to his re-election campaign.

Carter stated that the recovery of the economy was going well, though the recession will be "up and down" over the next few months. He will not advocate a tax reduction, saying that a decrease would "feed inflation in the future." Referring to Reagan's attacks to the President's stand on this issue, Carter responded that he could not allow "election pressures" to "shake economic policies."

Speaking on Iran, Carter said he did not foresee an early resolution to the hostage crisis, and at the moment the decision is in the hands of Iran's parliament. "The United States is not going to apologize," Carter stated firmly, but added that he will continue to encourage Iran air its grievances in an international forum.

The President believes his campaign to be "moderate" saying, "I try to discuss the issues . . . I do not attack the integrity of my opponent." These comments were made after he allegedly insinuated that Reagan was running a campaign of racism and hatred. He said, on the contrary, that he admired Reagan for rejecting the endorsement he received from the Ku Klux Klan, but again challenged him to a one-on-one debate in the White House "or any other forum here in this nation."

When asked to speculate why he has made gains in the public opinion polls, Carter responded that as the election draws near there is a "continual sobering . . . as to who is to control the policies of this country . . . in a calm and effective way and to keep it at peace."

FORMER NICARAGUAN PRESIDENT ASSASSINATED

Anastasio Somoza, former president of Nicaragua who vowed to "return and conquer his country, was assassinated in an ambush Wednesday in Paraguay where he had been living in exile. News of his death was marked by "wild" celebrations in Nicaragua where government officials claimed the "freedom forces" of Paraguay attacked Somoza's car with a barrage of bullets and bazooka shells.

Somoza and his family's 40-year rule was supported by the U.S. up until 1979 in the last months of the Nicaraguan revolution when Carter refused Somoza military aid.

The Nicaraguan government has been holding a trial in his absence for the "crimes of his regime," claiming his guilt in the death of 50,000 citizens and "multiple crimes against his opponent."

DECISION STANDS ON ABORTION

By a 5-4 vote last June, The Supreme Court upheld as constitutional a restriction on Medicaid spending for abortion excepting when a women's life would be endangered by childbirth or in cases of promptly reported rape or incest.

A third more than one million abortions performed each year since 1973 have been paid with Medicaid. The ruling is expected to lower the number of Medicaid abortions to fewer than 2,000.

The Supreme Court will not reconsider saying, "The petitions for rehearing are denied."

Last week Sister Rachel West commented on the alarmingly low participation of eligible voters in recent elections. The result of this apathy has been to enhance the already formidable influence of lobbyists in the service of "factions," as Madison called them in Federalist paper no. 10, with corresponding injury to the public good. Sister West went on to propose that students at the college register to vote and advised what might be done to inform themselves on the issues. It was good advice and I would like to expand on just why it was good advice.

The central question is: "Does politics really matter?" Perhaps nothing matters as much. Robert Drinan, S. J., presently a congressman from Massachusetts, in obedience to a Papal directive, is not standing for reelection. But he is not giving up politics; he is working for the election of his party's nominee in the district. As a congressman, Father Drinan was a civil rights and social justice advocate. For him "politics is the formation of public morality. "Just what one might expect from this tribe," you might say.

But others, non-priests, have agreed. The great conservative Edmund Burke said that "the principles of true politics are those of morality enlarged; and I neither now do, nor will ever admit of any other." Both Drinan and Burke may well have had in mind (certainly they read) Aristotle's discussion. For Aristotle the state is natural to man, not conventional, in that it is only as a member of an organized community that man's supreme good, the best possible moral and intellectual life, is possible. Wrote the philosopher, "He who . . . is without a State, is either above humanity or below it." One is sure that for Aristotle such a man fell "below it," to the level of the beast. From this it followed that politics is both the highest art and the most serious occupation.

Now all this business of Madison, Burke and Aristotle may well appear as one of those lofty, sonorous sermons, complimentary to our amour propre but in "the real world" so much clap trap. That's just the problem. That it may seem naive and irrelevant is the measure of the demoralization of our political life. When we see politics as the serious business it is by nature, our nature, then we will have a politics worth taking pains with. It won't happen by continuing to keep aloof. Of course, it may never happen.

U. S., CHINA SIGN PACT

Chinese Vice Premier Bo Yibo said China is committed to becoming a "highly democratic, civilized and modern nation," after the signing of an agreement by both he and President Carter exhibiting the growth in China/U. S. relations.

The pact allows for commercial airline traffic between the two nations, raising the limits on imported Chinese textile products, a mutual opening of ports to merchant vessels and an increase of consulates.

The agreements were termed as the "completion of the normalization process" after 30 years of diplomatic isolation.

—Min N. Jitus

In the wake of different occurrences taking place in violation of respect to others' property the last semester and early this semester, CARBON decided to chat with the head of the security dept. at Marian Mr. Ron Schmoll to discuss the presence of unruly elements even when a force to combat it existed in campus.

Mr. Schmoll, how would you define the Marian Security system?

Well, it's called the Continental Security System, they are here a little more than a year. Their personnel are responsible to check the lights, the boilers, direct traffic if we have any big function or any outside group having a function in our facilities. The Security is also responsible to ticket any parking violations and keep a watchful eye for any other violations or violators.

The present system replaced the earlier one not too long ago.

What was wrong with the previous system?

It was our own system. We did not have enough personnel to keep in uniform. And whenever a security person fails to show up, I myself had to do the job. But with the present system, though expensive, we have a better service.

About two years back, cars parked at the 30th St. parking lot were vandalized. Did the Marian authorities make an effort to find out who the culprits were?

Sure, we called on the detectives and they did their best. Unfortunately they could not find any lead. But I think this type of occurrence could be avoided if the students themselves report any kind of new or suspicious faces to us or even page the Security personnel in the campus.

Last semester, valuables like cameras and the like were missing from the dorms, did the present system track down the wrongdoers?

Things that are missing from the dorms—90% of the time students themselves are the culprits, if any students suspects another student capable of doing such a thing he/she should report it to the Controller or me and we will take action.

A week ago, two cars parked in the 30th St. parking lot were again vandalized; doesn't this question the efficiency of the Security system at Marian?

We have called the police and they are trying to get some leads. In the mean time we have hired an extra security person; his job is to keep watch on the 30th St. parking lot; this is costing us $300/week extra. In addition to this we have asked the city area police to do two rounds in the night.

What are the rules regarding parking violations?

Well, the first week there is a warning ticket. After that the first offence would cost you $3 and there after $5. But, if a person drives through the lawn, park in the fire lane, it's $5 right off the bat. However, if the person commits the same mistake more than three times, we tow the car away. This would cost the person about $40 and $3 per day additional for the no. of days you don't pick it up. The address is: Plough Wrecker Service

3901 E. Grant

Brownsburgh, In 46112

Tel. 852-3900

This is a remote possibility. In the 8 years I have been here, we have only towed four cars.

I know some students do a sloppy parking job. I know they do park in no parking areas. But this could be because they are in a hurry or late for class. But the point under question in last week's CARBON was, "why was the student given a five dollar ticket instead of three?"

That's taken care of. There's no way an officer could determine for sure that this car had violated the first time or 2nd time. I myself am against $3 and $5 tickets. May be we could make it one ticket for $4. This way there won't be any confusion. Now, if a person feels that he/she is been unjustly charged I would urge them to come to me and explain matters and I can check the record and deal with the situation. Remember, I am willing to work with you. Just come to me.

All in All Mr. Schmoll, do you think that the present system is working the way it should?

I certainly think so. With an additional person now to take care the Doyle area alone the system should work even better and I don't have any doubt about that. But like I said, I need the student's co-operation all the way.

When I talked to Mr. Schmoll he was glad that the CARBON was doing this "chat". He really seemed eager to help in all ways he can. He is on Ext. 205; if any of you have any ideas to improve the system please call Mr. Schmoll and let your suggestions be known. Mr. Schmoll, thank you for your time.

"WEST SIDE STORY"

It was my extreme disappointment Sunday to attend the musical production of "West Side Story" at the CTS Repertory Theatre. Taking into consideration that CTS is a repertory theatre, therefore amateur in status, I could not help but feel that the production was no more than "adequate" (a quote from Star critic Corbin Patrick) in presentation.

A modern day adaption from Shakespeare's tragedy "Romeo and Juliet," with book by Arthur Laurents, lyrics by Stephen Sondheim and music by Leonard Bernstein, the flaw in performance could not rest on the shoulders of these men. CTS's guest director/choreographer for this production, Lynnette Schisla, must have considered the abilities of her cast to dance and sing more important than their abilities to act.

The highlights in the show, such as the "Dance at the Gym," the "Quintet" and the character Anita were too few and far between. Of notable interest to the Marian Community is Linda Leonard who portrays the character Anita with strong believability. Linda is a '79 graduate of the Marian Theatre Department and gives this theatre student great inspiration.

"West Side Story" will continue at the CTS for the next two weekends including two performances on Sunday. The cost is $4.00 to full time students, $6.50 for adults. The Christian Theological Seminary Repertory Theatre is located at 1000 W. 42nd St. east of the Art Museum.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENT PROFILE

The 32 international students attending Marian College this fall semester represent 16 foreign nations. Both figures represent a small decrease from the fall 1979 international enrollment.

Only 11 of the students reside in the campus residence halls. Seven of the total are women, including one nun and two married persons.

Saudi Arabia has the largest number with eight students. Other multiple numbers include: Iran; 4, Columbia, 3; Venezuela, 3; Japan, 2. Single students represent the nations of: Bahamas, Viet Nam, Uganda, Mexico, Kuwait, Sri Lanka, Nigeria, Italy, Jordan, and Lebanon. Also represented is the region of Palestine.

Four of the students are upper classmen, reflecting the high turnover of pre-engineering students in the group. Eighteen are listed as Freshmen, eight as sophomores, one junior and three seniors.

The 32 international students represent 6.4% of the full-time students enrolled at Marian College. Twenty-five of the total attended English Language Services (ELS) classes before entering Marian.

STUDENT SOLDIER:

S/Sgt. David F Edwards, one of Indiana's most decorated servicemen, is currently enrolled part-time at Marian College where he is pursuing an associate degree in business administration.

This 15 year veteran-ten years in the Marine Corps and five in the Army-saw two tours of combat duty in Viet Nam, embassy duty in Morocco and Puerto Rico, and is now the Administrative Supply Technician at the National Guard Armory in Lebanon, Indiana.

Included among his many awards are the Navy Unit Commendation, the Meritorious Unit Commendation, the Presidential Commendation, the Vietnamese Technical Service Honor Medal and the Purple Heart.

Edwards said that he decided to attend college for two reasons: to broaden his own horizons, and also because of the advancement opportunities offered in the National Guard for a person holding a college degree.

When asked why he chose Marian, he replied: "Because of the things I've heard about it, the way the instructors care about the students, and how the students are treated like people and not like numbers."

He added that Marian was living up to his expectations and that he was enjoying the classes he is enrolled in. He said that one of the things he likes so far is the way the instructors take time to help students if they have any trouble with their work.

To the question of his finding college life a bit dull when compared with his former years in the Marines and over-seas duties he said: "It's different, but it's still a challenge."

Due to an excess of material this week, we have omitted a few letters to which we feel obligated to reply. We sincerely apologize for the postponement; They will be given priority next week.

Off the Wall

VIDEO KIDS

An explanation about this week's cover. The Video Kids are a four person dance band from Indianapolis. Although the members of the band come from other cities of the U.S. they are basically from the "hip part of Indy", known as Broad Ripple.

This week at Crazy Al's, an establishment that serves beer and Italian cuisine located at the corner of 54th and College, the Video Kids will play Thursday thru Sunday. It has been decided by Arkaytoons (Video Kids booking and management) that Marian College students accompanied by their student I.D. may be admitted for half the $2 door cover.

The band consists of Randy King, guitar vocals and keyboards, Pam Tango, vocals and keyboard (Pam used to tour and record with the Indpls. band, Faith Band), Frank Vandetta, bass background and vocals, and finally, Shadow Meyers, drums. Pam and Randy are responsible for most of the group's songs. Meyer's contributing some lyrics. The band primarily plays originals which are very danceable. The copy songs precede 1970. Songs such as Gloria, Pretty Woman, A Paul Revere and the Raiders medley and even a Video Kids version of Jimi Hendrix--Foxy Lady.

All and all they are a great band, well worth your $1 and effort, so come out this weekend at Crazy Al's (a well earned name) across from the Bulldog Lounge Thursday thru Sunday (they do serve beer and wine on Sunday) and have a good time. The sound should be fantastic. Tom Doherty does the mixing.

P.S. On Sunday they play early 8:30-12:00; other nights 10:00-2:00a.m..

"SAY GOODNIGHT, GRACIE"

Currently playing at the Broad Ripple Playhouse is a consistently thoughtful and humorous play, "Say Goodnight, Gracie", written by Ralph Pape.

The play centers around five characters getting together before their high school reunion, ten years after graduation. In just 90 minutes, the audience is eased into each person's life.

Each one of them are in a totally different reality--there's Bobby, this flipped-out musician who says things like "Let's get stoned", "Can I have some Coke", but yeah, he "knows where you're coming from". Steven, a child-like person who is living to make people laugh, wants to write a sit-com and have Norman Lear produce it. You want to believe him for his sake, but at the same time, you know you shouldn't fool him. Ginny is a "wanted-to-be-but-knows-she-never-will-be" genius. You guessed it--she's a secretary who just knows her boss could never get along without her. Jerry is an actor who says he wants to "express the hopes and fears of our generation." The trouble is--he can't even face up to his own fears. Catherine is an airline stewardess who, ever since a childhood revelation, has wanted to "reach out and touch everything." Her character seems weak in the beginning, but don't let first impressions fool you...she's a strong link.

The children of the "T.V. Age"--the guys who grew up with Capt. Video, and the girls who were in love (cont'd opposite)
