

It's over. Homecoming week has come and gone; but not without leaving memories.

The official dedication of the new Physical Education Center, a stunning 82-60 victory by the Knights over Goshen, in their first game in the new gym and the sealing of the time capsule, ended Homecoming week with high hopes for Marian's future.

General Education Requirements Changing

A committee consisting of Sr. Margaretta Black, Sr. Marilyn Hofer, Miss Mary Malatesta, Dr. Drew Appleby, and Dr. John Lowe has been reviewing the general education requirements here at Marian College. The changes in the requirements proposed by this committee have caused some amount of controversy as well as concern—a concern shared by students and faculty alike.

In an open discussion between committee members and students on Wednesday afternoon, the reason given for this revision was the desire to establish a more balanced curriculum for the students. "We wanted to make sure that all objectives, including skills (computer science, math)—were covered," said Sr. Margaretta, Dean of Marian College.

Dr. Appleby agreed, calling it a "balanced exposure to different points of view."

However, the concern expressed by students and staff is what does balanced necessarily mean, well-rounded? Would it be possible for core sources involved with such large amounts of information as are Humanities and Global Studies to be taught effectively with three, as opposed to four semester hours? Many faculty members do not feel this could be possible. That that time is needed in order to integrate their several fields of knowledge.

Others expressed concern that professionals want a well-rounded educated person and a certain body of knowledge has to be covered for this to take place. A concern over science courses being optional rather than required was also mentioned. Likewise, in spite of the committee's assertions that Literary Types would be deleted from the requirements because it's goals are not in other classes, many feel it is a valuable class and an asset to the curriculum.

Dr. Appleby explained that the proposed reduction in the hours for Humanities as well as the deletion of Literary Types is so as to permit this more balanced type of education. "We want the students to achieve certain goals which include dealing with critical thinking (logic, math, computer science), with politics, and with economics." "It does not indicate that one is more important, but that they are equally important and necessary in an overall education."

Elementary foreign language requirements would also be lowered from four to three semester hours, however, a math or computer science course would now be required, as well as a political science or an economics course.

Not yet finalized, the committee is open to any opinions on the proposed changes in the current general education requirements.

New Movies to see.....

A Christmas Story - The high point of this nostalgic comic movie comes when Ralphie goes to visit Santa Claus. It's one of the best Santa visits in a movie. Santa, a workaholic has one helper to spin the kid into Santa's lap and another to deposit him down a chute to his parents when the visit is over. It is a charming, loving story, set in the 1940's about a middle American family who are more concerned with keeping up with Norman Rockwell than their neighbors.

Star 80 - A depressing, uncompromising, but brilliantly filmed and acted portrait of a crime. It is the story of Dorothy Stratten the Playmate of the Year, murdered in 1980 by the husband she had outgrown.

Terms of Endearment - A wonderful film that moves with perfect ease from the cheerfully ridiculous to quiet moments of truth. One of this years best films
