LIGHTER SIDE

Last Saturday we had the most enjoyable time two co-ed females are allowed to have at a free event. We went to the Circlefest in downtown Indianapolis. If you missed it that is just too bad because we are going to tell you about it anyway.

First, being the penny pinching students we are, we parked for free at the downtown library and walked 20 blocks to the Circle. We walked around the Circle and then we walked around again, and then guess what... we walked around again. After about 10 times around we decided to stop and listen to a few of the bands. All of the bands decided to grossly interpret several popular songs. Listen, if we wanted to hear the top 40 we'd turn on the car radio in the library parking lot rather than walking 20 blocks to hear our favorite songs butchered.

We then decided to buy some food. After assessing our funds and comparing them to the prices we decided to split a small plate of nachos and two lemonades (yum). We sat down on the steps of the Circle to avoid making spectacles of ourselves trying to eat and walk at the same time.

On that day, that particular day, there just happened to be a drunk floating around in the crowd. Out of all of the millions of people walking around and out of the thousands of us sitting on the steps, he spotted us.

He staggered over to us and sat next to me (yuck). As my companion (Deb Ervin) tried to conceal her laughter, he struck up a casual conversation with me. His first comment was on the weather how hot it was. Then he proceeded to ask what we were drinking (i.e., coffee, Coke, or whiskey). Then, he said because of the hot weather, he sure could use a drink from my glass (gross). My companion burst out laughing and I calmly screamed "NO!!!"

While we had the chance we quickly vacated the premises.

About an hour later, our lemonade and nachos were gone and like the drunk we were starting to feel a bit parched. When all of a sudden we saw a Miller beer truck on one of the side streets. Deb courageously threw her body in front of the truck and demanded a beer.

After pulling Deb off of the pavement, we decided it was time to hike back to the car and return to Camp Marian.

CAMPUS COMEDY

During a faculty meeting, the speaker jokingly announced, "I've some good news and some bad news. The good news is that a student survey has revealed the coeds here find middle-aged professors sexy.

"The bad news," he continued, "is that they think middle age is twenty-five."

Bed sheets are often displayed at televised college football games with messages such as "Hi, Mom, Send more money!" or "Hi, Dad, Wish you were here!" At a game between the University of Michigan and Ohio State University, one student's message read: "Hi, Mom, Send more sheets!"

THE REAL STORY

My roommate and I were eagerly returning to our dorm one night after a few hours of studying at the library. As we were approached by three screaming girls, "Get in your room! Hurry, lock the door!"

"Why? What happened? What's the matter?" I asked.

"Hurry, come in our room and I'll tell you," Tracy demanded.

"Somebody has been stabbed to death on 3 west. She was running in back of the gym and a big black man came up from behind her and stabbed her." Laura was crying. "Oh, I'm scared."

Melissa and I were terrified, we had left our door unlocked while we were at the library. "What if he's in our room!? Come on Melissa we've got to check it out!" She and I crept into our room, vigorously thrust open the door, and reached for the light switch. No one was in sight.

"Check the closet," Melissa whispered. We stood at the sides of our closet and swung open the door, screaming at the cluttered sight of our hanging clothes. Again, no one was there.

The only place left to check, the shower, I thought. I just knew he had to be in there hanging from our shower spout. We hesitantly crawled into the bathroom and flung open the shower curtain. "Ahh!" We shouted.

"Phew! We're safe, at least he's not in our room," I sighed.

Suddenly the phone rang. It seemed as though it rang louder than usual. "You answer it."

"No way, I'm not gonna answer it, you answer it."

I ran to the phone and managed to pant out "Hello".

"Julie?"

"Yes," I replied recognizing our R.A.'s voice, since she had called so many times before demanding that we turn down our jamming stereo.

"This is Susan. I just wanted to call and ask you to help spread the news that no one got stabbed!"

"Are you serious? Well, then, what's going on around here? I'm really confused."

"Well, a sophomore girl was out jogging around the gym and was approached by a man with a knife. Don't worry though, she got away safe."

"Well, I'm glad to hear that, but I can't believe how fast the rumor had spread. Then again, I'm not surprised. Sure, Susan I will tell everyone, but do be careful. Thanks for calling."

I explained the conversation to my roommate as we left to spread the news around the hall. Returning to our room, we were both pretty shaken by all the excitement, but digusted how the story had gotten switched around so fast!

"I'm sure," said Melissa. "A girl was approached by a man with a knife, got away scott free and we hear that she was stabbed to death!"

"That is pretty sad. Rumors can be the worst thing sometimes," I agreed as I turned off the lights and crawled into my bunk.

The next day, when I went to my classes, I never heard such stories. Not only that, but it was the same story told 11 different ways. I just sat back and listened.

Why do people have to exaggerate so much? I thought. Students were paranoid and over reacting to say the least. Within the next week, people had claimed that they saw a man prowling around the girls dorm, a suspicious man driving around campus and a person's shadow in some bushes.

Again, Melissa and I were coming back from the library nine days later. "You know," I said. "This is the fourth night we've walked across campus in the last nine days, and we haven't seen a thing. I'm not really scared. I mean, I don't think I'd go out at night by myself or anything, but I'm sure not gonna lock myself in the room or carry around an aluminum baseball bat."

"I know, I'm beginning to think that there is a lot more said than what has really happened," agreed Melissa.

"Like, they say that we shouldn't go in the basement after 7:00 p.m. because that man was seen down there. Who was 'they' that forbids us to go down there? Who even saw him down there? And the news men who have been here, what proof do they have that the intruder has been here, besides all of the stories they have heard by all the paranoid people? You know, somebody around here is going to get hurt and it's not going to be by the intruder."

"I agree, some people are so scared out of their wits that they are afraid of themselves!"

Suddenly, someone came running out from between two buildings with a bat! Melissa and I took off running, when I heard a loud scream, I turned around to see my roommate tumble to the ground.

"Melissa!" I dashed toward her and fell at her side. She was unconscious.

A girl was standing in the distance holding a bat whimpering. "I, I, thought she, she was the... I was so, so scared! I'm sorry!"

"You fool," I screamed. "Go get some help! Please go get somebody! She'll die!"

KNIGHT STALKER

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL

The season for the Lady Knights is now in full swing. On Thursday, September 19, our ladies went to IUPUI to take on a tough Metro team. Although taking the first game of the match, the Knights went down grudgingly to the cross town rivals.

Saturday was a successful road trip as the Knights downed IUS and Vincennes. Behind the leadership of Jeanne Obergfell, the ladies easily disposed of IUS 15-3, 15-10.

On Tuesday, the Knights again went down to IUPUI, along with Indiana Central.

The Lady Knights got back on the winning track September 28, at the Purdue Calumet Tourney, as they took home the first place trophy. The Knights began the tourney against Trinity. Trinity took our spikers to 3 games but came up short. Next, was a strong Purdue Calumet team who went after our Lady Knights. Marian had a point to prove (especially to #10) to the Lakers. The Knights took the match in 3 games as a fine all-around effort was given by all, including our fans (especially the Beckam and Satterblom clans).

Anderson was defeated 15-5, 15-10 on the way to the semi-final match against St. Thomas Aquinas. Although very scrappy and well coached, Aquinas also went down to a now very determined Marian team.

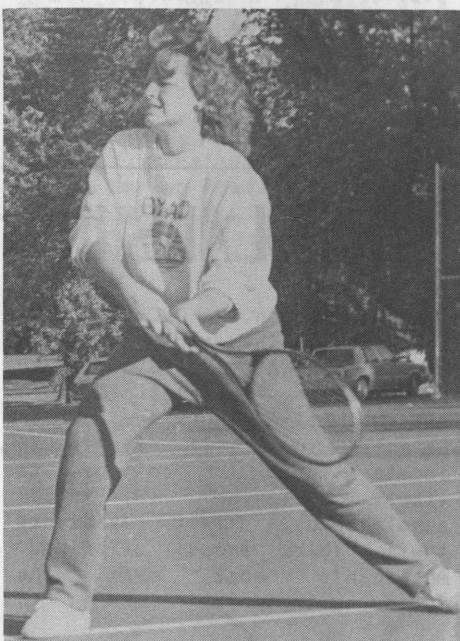

Purdue Cal and Illinois Tech was the other semi-final game. Illinois Tech came out victorious and the final stage was set. The Knights could smell a championship trophy.

The Knights took the first game, lost the second, but fired up their tired bodies to take the final game, match and trophy. Congratulations to Jennice Chaney and Jeanne Obergfell, as they were chosen on the All-Tourney Team.

On October 1, there was a game against Taylor University at Taylor. The Knights won easily 15-7, 15-7, 14-16, 15-7.

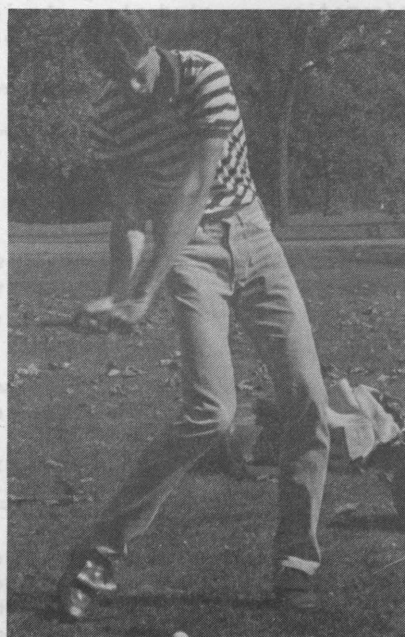

The next home game was October 3, with Depauw, and then there is one with Hanover on October 9. Results for these games were not available at time of press. Good luck Lady Knights! Also, thanks for all the fan support, and keep coming and giving your cheers. At time of press, the record was 17-5.

Keep going Knights!

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Prince racquets, the over-head smash, 6-0, 6-0. This is Girl's Tennis. For the teams first official season, they currently have a record of 1 win and 4 losses. They have played Butler, Taylor, and St. Mary of the Woods twice. They said revenge is so sweet and the girls "tasted" this sweetness in the match against St. Mary of the Woods at Terre Haute. The day was overcast and finished out with rain, but the awesome defeat showed that there was a silver lining behind every cloud.

Playing in the number 1,2,3,4 singles were: Bobbie Tucker, Nikki Ledgerwood, Teresa DeHart and Deanna McIntire. These ladies came out victorious.

Number 5 and 6 singles were Amie Klopfenstein and Jenna Morrow. Even though their scores didn't show they won, these girls fought until the bitter end. (Your still winners in our hearts.)

The doubles teams were untouchable. In the #2 doubles position was Deanna McIntire and Nikki Ledgerwood, and #3 doubles of Karen Kopach and Ami Klopfenstein. Both teams added points to our final winning score of 6-3. (The scores of the doubles matches will not be revealed to save face of the innocent victims on the St. Mary's team.)

As for the #1 doubles of Bobbie Tucker and Teresa DeHart - winning isn't everything - so keep up the good work.

Old Timers' Game

The annual contest between Marian alumni and the Golden Knights baseball team will be played Saturday at 1:00 P.M. This is the final game of the fall season for the baseball squad, who compiled an impressive 6-1 record for the short fall schedule.

PHILIP MORRIS COMPETITION

Do you need practical marketing experience? Enter the Philip Morris Marketing and Communications Competition. For the 17th year, Philip Morris Companies Inc., invites students to research any of its non-tobacco products and/or operations and submit a marketing communications proposal that could succeed in today's competitive business world.

Winning teams in both the graduate and undergraduate categories will receive first place awards of $2,000, second place awards of $1,000, and third place awards of $500. Representatives from the winning teams will be invited, with their faculty advisors, to be our guests at Philip Morris World Headquarters in New York City, where they will present their projects to the judges and Philip Morris executives. During their stay, winners will visit an advertising agency, tour the city and attend a dinner and awards luncheon in their honor.

Participation in the competition offers students valuable business experience while they are still in school as well as the opportunity to have projects evaluated by marketing and communications experts. The written proposals, layout, storyboard, videotapes or cassettes that participating students produce will be excellent portfolio entries and will illustrate their talent and motivation to prospective employers.

AC/DC IN CONCERT

"Highway...to...Hell!!!",

the man standing in the row in front of me yelled at the AC/DC concert on September 27. It was about halfway through the sold-out concert at Market Square Arena and he'd yelled these words out between every song ever since the group had hit the stage. My friend said to me, "If he yells that again, I'm gonna hit him." Fortunately for my friend (since the screamer was about 6'3", built like Arnold Schwarzenegger and carrying a knife), the opening riff of "Highway to Hell" blasted forth causing a frenzied response from the already standing 16,000 fans.

The guy shouldn't have worried. AC/DC has always been, and probably always will be, a band that will do exactly what they want to regardless of what critics or anybody else think about them. Who cares if they're supposed to be out on the road promoting their new album Fly on the Wall by performing a lot of new songs off the album to make the record company happy? Aside from three songs off the new album, AC/DC stuck with performing the proven crowd pleasers, such as "Highway to Heaven," that they've done for the last four tours.

Starting with the title track from the new album, I could tell the show was going to be basically the same as the two previous times I've seen AC/DC. Lead guitarist Angus Young, in his school boy outfit, is still the star of the show, with vocalist Brian Johnson as second banana. The rhythm section (rhythm guitarist Malcolm Young, bassist Cliff Williams and drummer Simon Wright) do a good job of anchoring Young's underrated guitar playing, but you can't really tell if it's even them since the spotlights are always on Young and/or Johnson.

Angus is, of course, far from being the best guitarist around, but he is an adequate player for AC/DC's heavy metal music and no one can be more energetic on stage.

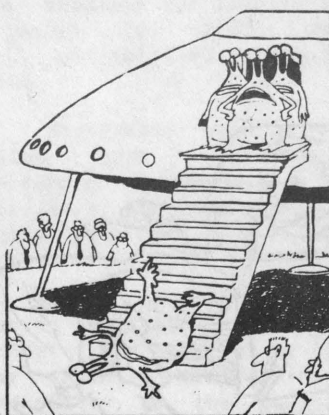

Johnson basically screams but must be appreciated that you can hear his singing above the band's nearly ear-shattering playing. I was half deaf from it for the rest of the night and part of the next day.

Yes, the band mixed old favorites like "Back in Black" and "You Shook Me All Night Long," with older favorites like "The Jack" and "Sin City." Yes, they rang a huge bell during "Hell's Bells" and shot off the cannons during the closing song, "For Those About to Rock (We Salute You)." And yes, Angus briefly exposed his buttocks during "Jailbreak." But, was there anyone at the concert who thought that they wouldn't do all of those things? I don't think so.

Basically, AC/DC is a crowd pleasing band that will always have an audience to perform to in concert. After seeing them three times they won't have me seeing them anymore, though. I mean, I can only watch a rerun so many times...

P.W.

"Wonderful! Just wonderful!... So much for instilling them with a sense of awe."

INTRAMURALS

The intramural softball tournament continued this Wednesday with a bang. In the 4:30 League the unbeaten King Combos kept their winning ways going with a 33-3 thrashing of the Fisheads. In the other 4:30 game the G-Spots topped the Bud Bunch 12-8.

In the 5:30 League the unbeaten Legally Intoxicateds upped their record to 6-0 with a 22-0 bombing of the GQ's. The Goobers edged the Furmans 14-11 with three runs in the final inning. The No Names, under the coaching of Steve Leonard, beat the Irrestables 4-2, and the Tubars eased past the Mustang Lounge 16-6.

The finals of the softball league will be played Monday, with the King Combos facing the G-Spots in the 4:30 league, and the Legally Intoxicated matched against the Goobers, and the Names paired with the Tubar, at 5:30.

CARBON DEADLINE

ALL REPORTERS: PLEASE SUBMIT YOUR ARTICLES NO LATER THAN 12 NOON ON TUESDAYS - MONDAYS EVEN BETTER!

THANKS.

DEAR MONI

DEAR MONI

We're only five weeks into the semester, and I feel weeks behind in my schoolwork. When I feel I'm finally making a dent in my homework, the teachers add more on. I thought people said Freshmen year was supposed to be the hardest. They lied! This is the hardest semester ever for me. The stress is high for me, and I know I'm not alone in this feeling. It seems to be running rapid through the Marian Community. Do you have any ideas how to reduce my stress level, so I don't want to quit school? I feel like I'm pulling my hair out for nothing.
Sincerely,
High on Stress

Dear High on Stress,

I understand how you feel. I get the same way sometimes. What you need to do is to sit back and see how far you have already come. This should make you feel somewhat better. Then, you should take time out. Just sit back and put your books away. Don't even think about the piles of homework that you have to do. During this time period do something that you enjoy to do. Remember this, you don't have much further to go. P.S. Remember that you live on campus, so if your activities are not OK by the student handbook, go off campus! Keep smiling.

Dear Moni,

This problem is so stupid! I just cannot believe that things like this happen in college. One of my teachers has a pet! Yes, you heard me right. In a class of mine, there is a student whom the teacher just loves. Nobody else gets a chance in that class. How am I going to tell this teacher that I am alive, and am somewhat smart?
Sincerely,
Lost in a crowd

Dear Lost,

Have you ever considered talking to the teacher. Don't ask her why she ignores you. Just ask her a question about the class. Make her realize that you are a student in her class. Make it obvious to her that you care. Then, maybe she will notice you. Good Luck!

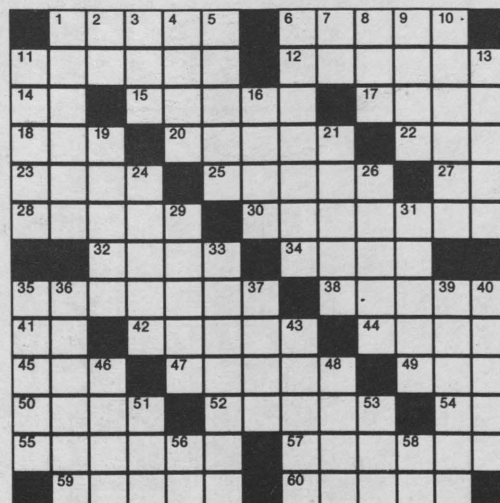

Dear Moni,

I am a resident of Clare Hall. I don't really mind the dorm, or the climb up the stairs, or the color of the walls. What I do think is disgusting is the dirty windows. It doesn't look like they have been cleaned for years. I have tried to clean the inside, but there is no way that I can clean the outside. Is there something that I can do about this?

Please Help!
Can't See

Dear Can't See

I can fully understand your problem. I lived in Clare Hall for a year, and put up with the windows. Your best bet is to talk to your hall director, or Clare Hall Board president. They could get in touch with someone who could do something for you, and the other girls.
