Sending Earth Day Wishes Your Way

by Chris Brebner

Well hello again and Happy Earth Day! Thursday will mark the 23rd Earth Day celebration since the first in 1970, so, celebrate! Enjoy the day! While your out enjoying the luxuries Mother Earth has provided for you, you can do things to help her live a long, healthy life.

-Take a walk - Along the way pick up the litter and throw it away in proper containers.

-Enjoy a picnic and recycle the bags and containers for future use. P.S. Don't use styrofoam, the stuff has been around since the dinosaurs and will be here long after we're toast.

-Instead of driving, ride a bike, walk or roller-blade.

-While your hanging out in the sun, you and your friends can drop a line to Congressmen pushing them to enforce pollution laws and save the ozone.

-Plant a tree! In return it will give you oxygen, shade your home, enhance the scenery, provide a home for wild critters and give you something to hug (and you should!)

-Hang a birdfeeder for Tweetie Anyway, hope the day is great. Get out and appreciate the planet. Earth Day is a day of awareness and sharing.

-We have a beautiful Mother
Her green lap immense
Her brown embrace eternal
Her blue body everything

We know.

-Alice Walker.

Check Out 16th and Georgetown

by Scott Gobel

With May just around the corner, things are beginning to heat up on the corner of 16th and Georgetown. No, not the one where the Whitecastle used to be, just across the street at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. This past week, Team Budwieser was in town turning in some impressive speeds during their tire testing phase. The biggest news from I.M.S. however, was Wednesday's announcement that on August 6, 1994 the first ever stock car race will occur at the Speedway. Those who follow auto racing are not really surprised at this announcement, after the more than favorable response shown in NASCAR testing last summer.

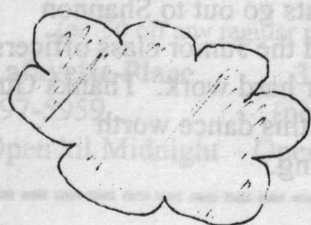

Opponents of this expansion say this venture will ruin the mystique of the two and one half mile oval, but I think this is an addition which is long overdue. Although the Indy 500 is the crown jewel of auto racing, the addition of the stock car race will enhance Indianapolis as the auto racing capitol of the world. In regards to the Indy 500, the track officially opens the first of May for practice. The cost is five dollars per person to get in, which, in my experience, provides cheap all day entertainment and is a great finals stress reliever. So grab some friends and meet me at the track.

Where are the Cow Women?

by Heather Ray

Femrealcynists need heroes just like everyone else does. So they look to the media to see if there are any women they can look up to and hope to be like.

Unfortunately there are few, if any, heroes for women in the media. Men have heroes. On t.v. they have the sensitive father who is raising the kids because their mother left or died (ex: "Blossom", "Full House", "My Three Dads"). In movies they have the tough guy who saves the day (Die Hard, any Eastwood or Bronson movie). Even little boys have heroes. Look at who saved the day in Home Alone. The tough, smart, and cute little man. So where are the tough women who save the day or the sensitive women who raise their kids and work and are not bitter bitches?

Well we can look at Murphy Brown and Rosanne as role models but only if we want to end up bitter and cynically evil. In the movies women have plenty of beautiful and stupid role models. (Thanks in part to Melanie Griffith.) There are lots of heroes for the woman who wishes to lose her mind and kill people. Just look for Rebecca DeMone or Sharon Stone. But where are the true cow women? Are there any women in the media world who don't cover their eyes and squeal as their man fights for their, and his, honor?

Have no fear. Women do have one good, tough, smart and even beautiful role model. Her influence could prove very beneficial if we are ever attacked by aliens. The grammy for cow women of the century goes to (gulp) Sigorney Weaver for her wonderful, intelligent, angry, logical, beautiful and heroic performance in Aliens 1, 2 and 3. She the only person who lifts a finger and a fire gun to kill the vilest of evil aliens.

So now you are saying, "Femrealcynist, you are a hypocrite, just a few weeks ago you condemned the media and now you are looking for role models in it." Unfortunately many people are influenced by the evil media. With nowhere else to look toward, the movies and t.v. shows provide an image of heroes. So many people waste so much time watching t.v. and movies that they are influenced by what they see even if they don't know it or want it.

Young as well as old people look to t.v. and movies for heroes and because there aren't any good ones for women, they model the bad ones or don't have anyone to model.

We need to expand the tunnel vision that allows women to be only certain things: beautiful, young, stupid and eager to please men. Women are more than bitter housewives, bitter journalists and wimps who need protection. We must prove that women too can fight the evil villain and save the town or planet. After all, once women learn that they too can fight evil and win, men will have more time for sensitive stuff and football. Then everyone will win, cow men and cow women.

Spring Formal Proves to be a Night to Remember

by Pamela Fleenor

On the morning of Saturday, April 3rd, I awoke with a feeling of excitement and expectation. I was to report, with a good friend of mine and our dates, at 2:15 to join the diligent crew in "Operation Decoration", lead by our faithful band of Junior class officers. We swarmed the 21st floor of the Hilton. The room appeared gloomy with black accents everywhere. We all hoped that the metamorphosis into "party central" would help. The transformation was well on its way. The awesome and somewhat spectacular Junior class president was on the phone with the hotel housekeeping staff requesting the last minute touches.

That evening we approached the line crowded with eager partygoers trying to get admitted and pick up souvenirs. Father Leopold, "The Official Greeter and Ticket Taker," had a smile and a compliment for everyone. The room looked spectacular, so did the view. We stood at the window, gazing at the beautiful site of "Monument Circle" at night. You could see miles of skyline and the vast black backdrop of sky. The dinner was wonderful and the dance was a huge success. My compliments go out to Shannon Tuggle and the Junior class officers for all their hard work. Thanks Guys! You made this dance worth remembering.

Students Bare Breasts in Protest

By College Press Service

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. --

Police were called to break up a student protest that involved 30 female students who bared their breasts during a student government meeting at Rutgers University's Douglass College. "There were no arrests," said college spokeswoman Pam Orel. "As far as we know, there will be no disciplinary actions, either." Kerry Riordan, 20, a sophomore and political science major, said the demonstration was in protest of the student government's treatment of some of the students that included "gaveling down" students in meetings who attempted to question authority.

Riordan said that the patronizing attitude included not allowing students to have a 24-hour study center, and not supplying security and additional lights on campus after several rapes.

The demonstration, said Riordan, was modeled after a gesture made by Sojourner Truth, a 19th-century abolitionist who bared her breasts to prove that she was a woman after being criticized for "not behaving like a woman."

"It was a liberating act. They have an idea of a stereotype of women," she said.

Stripper Causes Stir at Harvard

by College Press Service

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. -- A "strip-o-gram" for a birthday surprise ended with seven first-year Harvard University students being questioned by university police and administrators.

The Wigglesworth Hall residents who were questioned in late January won't face further disciplinary action, the Harvard Crimson reported. Six students hired a stripper for $120. She was to deliver a birthday message to a fellow student in Wigglesworth.

The stripper never arrived, but police did, the paper said, and that's when the students were questioned. "We have been serving customers at Harvard University for many years," a worker at Entertainment Inc. told the paper. "They have always proved to be very reliable."

The Way Home
by Corey Cleary

It seems that sometimes
We lose track of our lives.
The fear of being
Is all we have to survive.

And what is that
Which compells people
To believe that no one
Can care about them?

The path we choose
Is often lonely,
And the rivers
Have run dry.

Life can sometimes
be lonely,
It can even get
So cold.

It's time to change
The situation
Just think of me
When you close your eyes.

Don't you worry,
I'll help you find
The way home.

HAS ANYONE ELSE NOTICED THAT THE SUN NEVER SHINES IN INDY? AND WHEN IT DOES, IT DOESN'T LAST FOR MORE THAN A DAY???

So you left
It doesn't really surprise me.
As much as I hoped you were different,
Apparently I was wrong.
Now I'm here, you're not,
So much for spring,
So much for love,
So much, too much
For Absolutely Nothing.

"Cheese—milk's leap toward immortality." —Clifton Fadiman

Squeaky's Big Day

Once upon a time, there lived an adorable little white mouse named Squeaky. One day he was scurrying about happily. His tiny pink nose wiggled as he sniffed the air in search of food. When suddenly, he happened upon a tasty morsel of cheese.

Squeaky's favorite! The treat was attached to a large and deadly mouse trap. Uh oh! Squeaky eagerly snatched the cheese and... Oh happy day! The trap didn't go off! Squeaky got away!

Unfortunately the cheese was tainted with a generous portion of rat-poison which caused Squeaky to hemorrhage internally and die a slow, painful, bloated death.

The End.
